

CAFE in the Classroom

Helping Children Visualize and Attain Goals in Literacy Workshops

One-Day Workshop
Limit: 100 Participants

Appropriate for Grades K–5 Teachers, Literacy Specialists, Curriculum Coordinators, and Principals

Teachers know assessing young readers involves more than determining a reading level and moving them onto the next. Yet all too often, assessment systems don't provide much information beyond determining a child's reading level. Gail Boushey and Joan Moser (authors of The Daily Five: Fostering Literacy Independence in the Elementary Grades) developed the CAFE assessment system to help elementary students understand and master different strategies used by successful readers.

CAFE is an acronym for Comprehension, Accuracy, Fluency, and Expanding Vocabulary. Gail and Joan developed this system linking assessment to daily workshop routines. Joan and Gail are still teachers in the public school system, and they both use the system daily with students.

The heart of CAFE is a series of procedures within literacy workshops that enable even the youngest readers to self-monitor their progress, and chart their goals within the larger context of the classroom community. The program includes lessons to help students self-monitor, goal-setting with students in individual conferences, posting of goals on a whole-class board, developing small group instruction

Workshop Description

Teachers know assessing young readers involves more than determining a reading level and moving them onto the next. Yet all too often, assessment systems don't provide much information beyond determining a child's reading level. Gail Boushey and Joan Moser (authors of The Daily Five: Fostering Literacy Independence in the Elementary Grades) developed the CAFE assessment system to help elementary students understand and master different strategies used by successful readers.

CAFE is an acronym for Comprehension, Accuracy, Fluency, and Expanding Vocabulary. Gail and Joan developed this system linking assessment to daily workshop routines. Joan and Gail are still teachers in the public school system, and they both use the system daily with students.

The heart of CAFE is a series of procedures within literacy workshops that enable even the youngest readers to self-monitor their progress, and chart their goals within the larger context of the classroom community. The program includes lessons to help students self-monitor, goal-setting with students in individual conferences, posting of goals on a whole-class board, developing small group instruction based on clusters of students with similar goals, and targeting whole-class instruction based on emerging student needs.

These interactive workshops will include a brief overview of the research that supports CAFE. Participants will also be provided with the tools they need to get started with CAFE, including recordkeeping forms, sample goals, and tips for organizing teacher notes.

Each participant will leave with a resource binder, CD of templates and workshop suggestions, and a DVD with over 80 minutes of individual, small-group, and whole-class examples of CAFE with students who have a range of needs and goals. Gail and Joan will share video clips of the programs in action, so participants can see how individual children work with their teachers to set goals and post them, and then how the teacher uses the information from individual conferences to plan small-group and whole-class instruction.

Schools are paying a fortune for prepackaged programs and kits to help teachers assess the reading needs of their students and help them work well independently. CAFE is not a packaged program or kit, and nothing needs to be purchased to put it in use—it is a simple series of research-based strategies that any teacher can use to help their students develop independence and monitor their own growth as readers.

Look what participants are saying about previous CAFE in the Classroom Workshops:

Inspiring! The timing has me recharged for the new school year. It puts everything in perspective about assessment driving instruction.

—Literacy Specialist from Nebraska

Awesome— very user friendly and appropriate for the way education is moving today. The interactions when we had specific questions relating to our classrooms and the small size of the workshop were excellent.

—Teacher from Oregon

This was well-organized, with excellent presenters. I felt more like I was having a casual conversation with colleagues—it was highly energizing and the giveaways were such a nice touch.

—Grade Level Team Leader from Ohio
